Reverse Brain Drain

人才回流

According to reports of LA Time (3/4/93), US News & World Report (9/22/93), Christian Science Monitor (5/19/94), the number of foreign students and professionals in the United States are packing and going back to start careers in their home countries. The case of students from the Republic of China on Taiwan is a typical example. The chart on the left indicates the reversal of brain drain between 1970 and 1994. Better social, economic and educational enhancement have accounted for the phenomenon. (Chen-ching Li)
